FIRST ANNOUNCEMENT

Genotoxicity in aquatic systems: Causes, effects and regulatory needs

2. INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM

Dessau-Roßlau, Germany
14. – 16. April 2008

Organizers:

Water Chemical Society
Division of the German Chemical Society
Working Group: Genotoxicity
Federal Environment Agency (UBA)
Federal Institute of Hydrology (BfG), Koblenz
SETAC Europe German Language Branch

SCOPE OF THE CONFERENCE

Genotoxicity, mutagenicity and carcinogenicity stand for the most adverse toxicological impacts of chemicals on human beings and environmental organisms.

Therefore, natural water bodies like surface waters, ground waters and drinking water resources should be saved from anthropogenic impacts of substances with genotoxic potentials as far as possible.

Four years since the first INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM, the next has been scheduled to inform the scientific and regulatory community about advances and new strategies in the assessment of genotoxic hazards, to inform about the use of these assessments in regulatory policy and decisions, and to provide a multidisciplinary forum for the open exchange and discussion of ideas and opinions among students, research scientists, regulators and industry.

Following the development of new technologies, this INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM is focused on several different themes: Sources and potential hazards of genotoxic substances in aquatic systems; Ecogenotoxicity/system level focus; Advanced technologies/new trends; Regulatory use of test results for protection of aquatic biota and humans.

Each topic will include an invited plenary speaker, plus oral presentations selected from the submitted abstracts. Participants are invited to present platform presentations and posters.
